

July 2024 – Redbourn

July's (delayed by one week) walk was scheduled on the hottest day of the year so far, when the temperature topped 30 degrees but undeterred twelve of us sallied forth from the Hollybush pub in Redbourn.

The walk, just under 6 miles, was fortunately not too challenging, just one hill down (in the sun with glorious views over towards Flamstead) and one hill up (mercifully in the shade) the rest being fairly level although one tricky little section needed Giles to wield his trusty secateurs for us to progress unscathed.

We enjoyed a good lunch sitting in the relative cool of the pergola in the beer garden.
